With Dr. Sarah Schulman, co-author of the book – The Trampoline Effect: Redesigning Our Social Safety Nets.

Dr. Sarah Schulman has spent her career in buses, bingo halls, and back alleyways as a social scientist focused on the experiences of people living on the margins. She is a founding partner of InWithForward, an international social design organization whose teams have produced award-winning and scalable interventions. InWithForward is her fourth organization; she started her first in elementary school. Sarah holds a BA (Hons.) in human biology, an MA in education, and a DPhil in social policy from Oxford University, where she was a Rhodes Scholar.
